“My son found the camp very helpful. He never really talked about his feelings, but after camp he started talking about how he feels sad that his dad is no longer around. He enjoys attending and feels better about not having to put on a false face. He can truly be himself.”

A 3-day summer day camp for children who experienced the death of a loved one.
Help and Healing for Grieving Children

Grief is difficult for everyone. It can be especially confusing for children who do not have the life experiences and resources adults draw on during difficult times. Camp helps fill that gap by:

- Offering campers an opportunity to be with peers who also experienced loss; this helps them realize they are not alone.
- Developing campers’ coping skills for expressing and processing their grief.
- Teaching campers that it is ok to have fun and still honor their loved ones.
- Providing therapeutic and social activities such as pet therapy, games, art therapy, music and a family style dinner at the conclusion of camp.
- Assisting campers to talk openly about their loved ones with camp staff and peers.
- Having trained staff that includes: Professional grief counselors, social work interns and trained volunteers.
